Interuniversity PhD Program in History and Philosophy of Biology

The newly launched Interuniversity PhD Program in History and Philosophy of Biology invites applications from excellent candidates. The program is geared towards candidates with training in history or philosophy of biology and/or those with relevant training in science. The program is run jointly between Tel Aviv University, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem and Bar Ilan University. It is generously supported by The Humanities Fund of the Council for Higher Education and the Yad Hanadiv foundation.

During the current enrollment period we are especially interested in applicants who want to work on issues related to explanation, systems biology, and evolution of morality. We encourage students interested in these topics to apply, but all topics related to history and philosophy of biology are welcome.

Applications and admittance

Candidates will be registered in one of the participating universities and subject to its rules and regulations. Candidates are requested to submit the following materials:

1. A current CV.
2. Transcripts from all degrees taken.
3. Statement of purpose, detailing the candidate's intended research (up to two pages).
4. Two letters of recommendation, to be sent directly to the program.
5. A writing sample.

Applications will be considered on a rolling basis, beginning May 20, 2017.

Please send the aforementioned materials to: ihpls.phd@gmail.com.

Inquiries may also be sent to this address.

Funding

Admitted students will receive 4 years of full funding. No teaching required.
